

Why you should vote exercise.

Ask people to go stand by the issue they care the most about. Ask them to draw a colored piece of paper out of a hat or simply hand out (see chart for how many pieces of what color paper to use). Once they have their colored paper, say the following:

- if you have pink paper, please sit down because you are not a citizen.
- if you have blue paper , please sit down because you did not register to vote.
- if you have yellow paper please sit down because you could have voted, but decided not to.

Now look around the room. The people left with orange paper are voters.

Are they standing in front of the issue you care about?

Do you trust the 4 out of 10 people who vote to represent your issues?
